FIFTY-TWO YEARS OLD — NILES, CALIFORNIA, FRIDAY, MARCH 1, 1940 — NUMBER 9

ODDITIES IN THE NEWS

Longer—

Pittsgurgh, The thirteen page complaint Walter J. Morrison filed to back his plea for a divorce was "longer than 'Gone With the Wind' said Judge M. A. Musmano. "But not as pleasant," replied Morrison, pointing to subheadings such as "My wife's attitude toward me" and "Refusal to do housework and insistence that I do it."

No. 1 Draftee—

New Orleans, Sidney J. Defeuentes, 63, whose name was drawn first in the United States' second World War draft, died. He was a prominent cotton broker.

Hobby —

San Francisco; A note he wrote to himself in 1934 returned yesterday to Edward Rader—after it had been six years at sea in a whisky bottle. Rader, who lives at 1481 Eddy Street, was formerly a ship bartender. He has been throwing bottles with notes in them overboard since 1896. Only two have come back. The note returned yesterday was tossed from the President Coolidge 100 miles off Yokohama. Carl Hashbrouck of Westport, Wash., found it washed up on the beach there last week and sent it to Rader. "If I threw one note overboard, I threw a thousand," Rader said. Another note came back to Rader in 1938 from Cannon Beach, Ore., three years after he had dropped it from the President Hoover in Japanese waters. Rader's hobby has been neglected recently; he has a bartender's job—ashore.

Occupational Notes—

Pueblo, Colo.: One of the inmates of the Colorado State Insane Asylum (an ex-newspaper mas under treatment for alcoholism) does a thriving business selling gags and ideas to magazines and cartoonists.

Brooklyn, N. Y.: Add to little-known professions—that of Maurice A. Hamonneau, bookbinder extraordinary, who puts bindings on books to harmonize with their subject matter. Thus Hamonneau will encase a volume on reptiles in snakeskin, or dress a book on music in ivory piano keys. For Hitler's "Mein Kampf," Hamonneau chose skunk skin.

No Howling Success—

Brooklyn, N. Y.: Because M. Wiggers has unusual ideas on wooing, he rated a $2 fine last week on a disorderly-conduct charge. The Wiggers method: according to neighbors of his lady love, the swain parked himself under her window, threw pebbles against the pane, and induced his dog to howl softly and tenderly. "Next time," the judge advised, "try a guitar."

Zipper—

Grand Rapids, Mich.: Facing an overtime parking charge, a woman came up with an alibi that floored a hard-boiled police sergeant and made him dismiss the case. "I parked my car and was in a store trying on a girdle,' she said. "The clerk zipped it up and then went to answer a phone. I couldn't unzip it and there I was until she came back."

Millennium—

Bethany, Mo.: Observing a rat in a barrel, Harvey Lewis dropped his cat in with the rat and hurried off to lunch without waiting to observe the work of destruction. After he had eaten, he came back a look. There, on the bottom, were cat and rat, snuggled togethes and dozing peacefully.

Confucius Confusion—

New York City: Questioned by Magistrate Raphael Murphy, eight men arrested for selling "Confucius Say" pamphlets on the streets without licenses revealed an appalling ignorance of their product. Only one of the prisoners could spell the Chinese sage's name correctly, and even the arresting officer had slipped up on the spelling. Guesses as to Confucius' identity among the prisoners ranged from actor to Broadway gag man. Only one had it right, but that didn't save him. He was fined $2 along with the rest.

Suspicious—

Los Angeles: Ernest Benson has 110 clocks in his room, all running But when he gets up in the morning does he set an alarm? No, he says. He has the hotel clerk call him.

Prefers Jail—

Collingswood, N. J.: Members of the Collingswood Women's Club would rather go to jail than answer "personal" question about age divorce and salary in the new Federal census, they said in a protest resolution today. "Why," exclaimed Vice-President Mrs. George Ware, "the census-taker might be your next-door neighbor! A secret isnt a secret any more.

HEAVIEST RAIN IN YEARS STRIKES TWP. PAST WEEK

COUNTRYSIDE IS FLOODED AND SOME CROP DAMAGE DONE BY EXCESSIVE RAINS OF THE PAST WEEK

Rain has been the topic of conversation the past week, when not only Washington township and Alameda county took a soaking, but the entire state reports heavy precipitations and flood damage.

Since Thursday of last week up to Thursday morning the guage at the Southern Pacific depot at Niles, shows a fall of 5.83 inches. Tuesday morning at 7 o'clock the time of reading, the guage showed that 2.47 inches had fallen during the 24-hour period preceeding that time, which depot men say is the heaviest in that length of time since a record has been kept, during some 20 years.

The figures show recordings as follows:

Friday	.33
Saturday	.05
Sunday	.35
Monday	.61
Tuesday	2.47
Wednesday	1.02
Thursday	1.00
Total	4.73

This fall during the past week brings the total for the season to 22.11 inches, as against 11.75 for the same period last year. Creeks ran bank full, storm sewers flooded and in low places, the water spread over the country side. Trainmen report mud on the tracks in Niles canyon, but no great damage to right-of-way. Alameda creek has been a torrent since Monday.

In the vicinity of Alvarado crews of men have been at work all week constructing and repairing dikes to keep the streams within bounds. The Swamp road between Alvarado and Newark was flooded in many sections and traffic diverted over other routes. Orchards and garden plots have been covered with water, which began to recede Wednesday forenoon when a let-up in the rain came.

Some fruit growers report some damage to apricot and prune trees caused by continued wetting. Some cauliflower has been damaged, and those harvesting the crop have found it a strenuous job, fighting flooded fields and much mud.

Everyone agrees it has been the heaviest continued rainfall in a good many years, and when the sun came out Wednesday forenoon, most people were well pleased.

WARM SPRINGS LADY HAD HER TROUBLES TOO

MRS. DARROW OF THE DARROW WINERY EXPERIENCED TWO UNPLEASANT HAPPENINGS

Fate chose Mrs. E. M. Darrow of Warm Springs to be the victim of two unpleasantries the past week. An Albany man, the first to bother the lady, Robert Wilson pulled the time-worn bill changing act, upon making a purchase of wine at the winery. In the confusion, which is a part of the slick exchange, Mrs. Darrow became suspicious and took the car license number. Sure enough, she was short-changed in the deal, after she had time to figure it out and she called Deptuy Sheriff Henry Varvais, who ran down the culprit. Before Judge Silva in Niles justice court he drew a $20 fine, which was remitted providing he make himself scarce about Washington township.

Joe Wilson, a San Francisco painter, looked on the wine when it was red. He, trying to get to his proper residence, lost his way, and thinking he was at home, gained entrance to the Darrow house, by breaking a glass in the door to get at the lock. Judge Silva, after hearing his story that he did little drinking and that he was a first-class fellow, let him off upon extracting the price of the glass.

"SOCIAL SECURITY" TOPIC OF DISCUSSION GROUP MEET

At the meeting of the Discussion Group, at the cafeteria at Washington Union high school Wednesday evening, the topic was "Social Security". Edwin Bates, regional representative of the Social Security board, from San Francisco, addressed the meeting on this important subject, and at the conclusion of his talk, a general discussion was carried on.

OAKLAND MAN WEDS PROMINENT NILES GIRL

Merle Jones, of Oakland and Miss Eloise Silva were joined in marriage at Oakland the last of the week, Fr. O'Connor, former pastor of the Niles Catholic church, performing the ceremony. Following the wedding, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Silva, honoring the couple, when many friends were in to extend well wishes. Mrs. Jones is a graduate of Washington Union high school and has many friends and acquaintances in the community. Mr. Jones is a resident of Oakland where he is employed by the Oakland street car company.

BARBARA WILLIAMS WINNER OF NATIVE DAUGHTERS CONTEST

ESSAY CONTEST ON THE "BEAR FLAG" CREATES MUCH INTEREST AMONG STUDENTS

Miss Bargara Williams, took first place in the contest sponsored by the township parlor of the Native Daughters of the Golden West, presented at the high school Friday evening. Arthur Kimber took second place with his entry, and Betty Jane Steinhoff was third. The several entries were most interesting, the sponsoring organization officers sponsoring showed that the contestants had put much time and thought on the subject, which they well understood.

Miss Williams' entray was as follows;

"The Bear Flag? What a strange name for a state flag?" Many visitors to California have probably uttered these words, not realizing the true story behind one of the world's most unusual flags. The Bear Flag was the spur-of-the moment brain-child of a little group of determined men; it flew only a short time, as the flag of the California Republic; yet it came as a fitting climax to one of the most interesting eras in the history of the Union's most fascinating state.

The story of California under six flags is the story of the rise and fall of a civilization, and the replacement of that easy-going civilization by one much stronger and more lasting.

We will require a little imagination to work ourselves into the right mood for the story. To really understand that lazy, fun-loving people, we must be a little dreamy eyed ourselves.

Let us turn the pages of this great hide-bound book and peer into the musty past. A withered something that was once a rose placed here for a bookmark by the absent fingers of some senorita, crumbles to dust as we turn the pages back to pastoral California. The faded petals of the rose become the swishing ruffles of a dancer's skirt.

The Revolutionary War was waging in the thirteen English colonies when Russian encroachment from the North woke Spain to the possibilities of her forgotten California territory. Once Spanish interest was aroused, settlers came from Mexico to make California a lazy, laughter-loving land. Vast ranchos, no cities, a few scattered villages, the proud aristocracy, the roving vaquero, the simple peon and Indian, the kindly padre, and a motto, "Never do today what you can put off 'til tomorrow"; this was California from the last of the eighteenth century to the middle of the nineteenth.

Seemingly, this idyll was only temporarily shattered by the secularization of the missions, the change of power from Spain to Mexico, and the internal toubles which followed, but there an era ended. There was left only an enterlude between the old days of Spanish supremacy and the swift chain of events which were to drive old Alta California and her easy ways from the earth.

So California remained, a ghost of Spanish grandeur. Her way of life belonged to an age that was past. While the Industrial Revolution was making changes in the United States and Europe which speeded up their developement tremendously, California remained blissfully the same.

"Manifest Destiny". The words drove pioneers over the mountains and across the plains toward the west and California. The westward movement was as slow and sure as the turning of a wagon wheel on one of the endless creeping trains. Even when the rumbling wheel touched Texas, the first turbulent whisperings were heard in Mexico City, and Captain John Fremont arrived in California on his mysterious errand, California continued her siesta in the sun. It took a herd of horses to startle her from her slumber.

The horses belonged to General Castro and they were being driven from the high mountain pastures to a rancho when they were stolen General Castro accused Fremont of the theft and threatened to exclude all the 'gringos' from California. The United States' hopes concerning the territory hung in the balance.

A small party of American settlers led by William B. Ide took the decisive step. They captured General Vallejo at his home in Sonoma, at daybreak on June 14, 1846. The party was not authorized to use the American flag, so they concocted one of their own on the spot. Red, blue, and gold, with a bear and a star as emblems the Bear Flag was born. Those emblems were chosen because "the bear stands his ground always, and as long as the stars shine, we stand for our cause".

Commodore Sloat took Monterey on July 7 and formally proclaimed the American conquest. This was not the first time Monterey had seen the Stars and Stripes, for Commander Jones had taken the startled town by surprise four years before, believing that the United States had declared war on Mexico. A strong sentiment favoring annexation had existed for years, even among the native Californians, and there was only one conflict on California soil, the battle of San Pasqual, before Mexico ceded California by the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo.

Our story is told. The Bear Flag flew in an official capacity for only twenty-three days; yet in those twenty-three days history was made. The Bear Flag symbolizes California's change from a land with a "manyana" atmosphere to a highly industrialized, progressive state, part of a country with a future. California is still the "tomorrow land", but her tomorrows have a new meaning.

EZRA DECOTO TO ADDRESS TEACHERS

At a meeting of teachers of the county, to be held at the Hotel Oakland on Saturday evening of next week, Ezra Decoto, an old time resident of Washington township, will deliver an address on "A Buggy Ride Through Southern Alameda County." The teachers look forward to something very interesting ,as the speaker is one of the oldest residents of Washington township, and knew his way around in the younger days of the community. He is a graduate of Washington Union high school with the class of 1894.

RELIEF PAYMENTS ANNOUNCED AFTER NEW SET-UP

RELIEF BENEFITS REDUCED CONSIDERABLY FOLLOWING LEGISLATIVE ACTION

Since the smoke has cleared away at Sacramento, and the state legislature has adjourned after passing the new relief bill, those on the rolls will find how the 40 per cent reduction will effect them in the following schedule:

Single men and women will receive $11.11 per month. Formerly they received $18.52.

Childless couples, $18.64—a reduction from $31.06 monthly.

Families of four, $25.54. Formerly they got $42.57.

Couples with seven children, $58. The former scale was $84.68.

CRANE GARAGE SELLING CARS

CLARENCE CRANE NOW DISPLAYING DeSOTO AND PLYMOUTH CARS AT NILES

Clarence Crane, proprietor of the Crane garage, Niles, has signed a contract for the sale of Plymouth and DeSoto cars in this territory, and has models of each make on the show room floor. He reports many prospects for these popular cars, and expects to do a good business.

The DeSoto is a deluxe model, with all the new fixin's and is a very attractive machine, selling for something over $1,000. The Plymouth, too, is a deluxe with a price less than $1,000. Mr. Crane is quite enthused over these cars and will show you their features upon calling at the garage.

POSTMASTERS OF COUNTY AT NEWARK MEETING

The Alameda County Association of Postmasters held its monthly dinner meeting on Wednesday evening at Butlers Hotel with Julia Ruschin acting as host for the evening. Mr. O. J. Hurlbut of the Westvaco Chlorine Product Corporation was guest speaker for the evening and gave a very interesting talk on "An unusual chemical industry," which was greatly enjoyed by all present. The next meeting of the Association will be held in San Leandro with Postmaster Al Neish as host.

NILES CLUB ACTIVE DURING NATIONAL ROTARY WEEK

GROUP PRESENTS PROGRAM AND MAKES VISITATIONS TO OTHER BODIES AND INSTITUTIONS

The closing days of National Rotary Week found the Niles club active in many ways. The club's program during the week was along the lines set out by the international body, and was carried out in an interesting and entertaining manner for the members.

The display at the Central bank interested many non-members, and was a means of enlightening the community on the aims of Rotary. The club met jointly, last week with the Niles Chamber of Commerce. As the club has received national recognition for several achievements, this was all pointed out at the meeting during the week.

Friday, Principal E. D. Bristow invited the club to attend an assembly at the Niles grammar school, at which time Secretary E. E. Enos made an interesting talk to the school students. "Go to a child for the Truth." Mr. Enos stated. He explained the aims of the organization to the students, and closed his remarks with the statement that if Rotary can keep the confidence of the youth of the community, it's future is assured. Past President "Chuck" Kraft, made a short talk also. Students from the high school, all graduates of the Niles grammar school presented entertaining numbers with Tommy Champion, Andrey Lindsay, Phyllis Owen, Lawrence Moise, Mary Cattaneo and Lorraine Peterson having parts.

As guests of E. A. Quaresma, member from Irvington, the club made a tour of the Irvington stove works.

This concluded a busy week for the club as its part in the international observance of Rotary.

COUNTRY CLUB TO PRESENT NOTED SOPRANO

The Country Club of Washington township will present Miss Anna Barber, noted soprano in a concert at the club house on the evening of March 30. Members of the organization feel that they are fortunate in securing Miss Barber for a concert, and that they are bringing high class entertainment to people of the community. The admission charge will be but 40 cents per person.

OTHERS INTERESTED IN CO-ORDINATING COUNCIL

Four citizens of Lodi visited Washington Union high school to study the set-up of the Co-Ordinating council of this township with a view to carrying on there in the same manner as in Washington township. There are successful councils in many cities and incorporated areas of the state, but in Washington township, the most successful council is found in the so-called rural area, and this was the interesting factor that brought the Lodi people to study the local procedure. Superintendent Rathbone received a letter from L. V. Koss, editor of "School Review" and a member of the University of Chicago faculty, asking for an article on the Co-Ordinating Council for the magazine on this important subject.

JUNIOR CHAMBER TO HAVE MEET MONDAY

The Niles Junior Chamber of Commerce will gather for the regular meeting Monday evening at 7 o'clock at the Florence restaurant The officers are particularly anxious that all members be present as matters of importance are to by discussed. The board of directors will present the program that has been drawn up for the coming year, and a discussion will take place on any other projects members believe will be helpful. A report will be made on the recent meeting at Berkeley, when several members of the club attended a Junior Chamber session.

TOWNSHIP LOSES ONE OF LONG TIME RESIDENTS

MRS. MATTOS, WIFE OF LATE JURIST, CALLED BY DEATH LAST FRIDAY

Mrs. Annie Elizabeth Mattos, the wife of the late Judge John Mattos passed away at the family home in Centerville Friday, February 23, following an illness of more than a month. Funeral services were conducted at the Holy Ghost church, Centerville Tuesday, and burial was made in the Catholic cemetery at Hayward.

Mrs. Mattos was a native of the township, spending most of her intire life in the community. She lived an interesting life and had a host of friends who join relatives in mourning her passing. She leaves three sisters, Nellie Brophy, of this community, and Margaret and Jone Bophy of Oakland.

Her late husband had a prominent part in the affairs of this section, serving as appraiser at the Port of San Francisco for several years. He was connected with the Bank of Centerville, and acted as president of the institution. Later he served as justice of the peace.

COUNTRY CLUB WILL HEAR SCHOOL MAN IN ADDRESS

REV. COPELAND OF SANTA CLARA UNIVERSITY TO TALK BEFORE COUNTRY CLUB OF TOWNSHIP

Rev. Raymond F. Copeland, formerly of Irvington, now with Santa Clara university, will deliver an address before a meeting of the Country Club of Washington Township Tuesday afternoon, Mrs. McWhirter, of Centerville, program chairman reports.

Rev. Copeland has selected as his topic "The Life and Works of the Late Senator Wm. E. Borah." He is a speaker of note and members of the club look forward to a most enlightening address. Thomas Haley of Santa Clara university will provide music for the program. The committee in charge includes Mrs. McWhirter, Mrs. H. F. Chadbourne, Mrs. George Emerson and Mrs. H. B. White. Hostesses are Mrs. Ralph Emerson, chairman; Mrs. Harold Houghton, Mrs. Rinolda Cozzi and Mrs. Robert Anderson.

NEWARK BOOSTERS ENTERTAIN LADIES

The Newark Boosters club held Ladies Night, Thursday evening at Butler's hotel, when a fine dinner was enjoyed and a program presented for the special benefit of the lady guests. Sam Scott acted as toastmaster and handled the job nicely. Gentlemen guests from out of town were Supervisor George Hellwig; Captain Louis Eike and Sergeant Dolye, of the California State police, Wayne Herrick, Stockton attorney, spoke on civic activities of that city. He being an accomplished pianist, he presented several selections. Thor Nordvik, our local pianist also presented some fine numbers. Several members spoke on the things the club has accomplished during the past year. Tony Francis is president of the organization.

AUSTIN TRIES TO SWIM THE UNDERPASS

An Austin owner, believing his oversize roller skate would negotiate the 15 feet of water in the S. P. underpass at the north end of Main street, Niles, tried to go through against the warning barriers, but found it couldn't be done and there he sat, with his machine nearly submerged. Help came along and dragged the car out after it and the driver got a thorough soaking.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS BY JOSEPH W. LaBINE

Scandinavian Peace Endangered By Pressure From Belligerents; Finn Defenses Breaking Down

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

Released by Western Newspaper Union

EUROPE:

While Franklin Roosevelt was fishing south of the Panama canal, his two special peace emissaries were on the high seas en route to settle Europe's quarrels. Steelman Myron C. Taylor would work from the Vatican. Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles would travel to Italy, Germany, France and Britain seeking a basis for a post-war settlement. They had to work fast, because the European dogfight was fast getting out of hand:

In Scandinavia

Not only Finland, but Norway and Sweden as well were being drawn into other peoples' wars. Undoubtedly sympathizing with the Finns, Stockholm and Oslo governments had to stay on their good behavior or risk reprisals from Germany. That was why Per Albin Hannson,

PER ALBIN HANSSON
Sweden sympathized, but . . .

Swedish premier, had to refuse Finland's plea for direct military aid. The Finns, meanwhile, were sagging badly, surrendering key posts on the Mannerheim line before Russia's relentless attack.

(But Mannerheim losses were partially equalized by gains elsewhere. Northeast of Lake Ladoga, the high command announced, 18,000 Red soldiers have been killed or captured, wiping out the entire eighteenth division.)

Oslo had an even hotter potato in its hands. Attacking Germany's prison ship Altmark within Norwegian territorial waters, a British destroyer had rescued the prisoners and scooted for home while Nazi crewmen fled to the interior. Angry notes were exchanged, Norway finally calling its parliament to decide on a course of action. Why, asked London, had Altmark been allowed within Norwegian territorial waters? Why, asked Berlin, had Norway failed to protect Altmark from the British?

Talking back boldly for a small power, brave Norway bluntly told the British that the Altmark case would probably be protested to the League of Nations "or some other tribunal." Nor was there much doubt that Norway was within her rights.

In the West

There was no action between the Maginot and Siegfried lines, but the Altmark incident stirred up reprisals at sea. Britain seized two Nazi merchant ships carrying manganese from Spain. Down to Davey Jones' locker went Britain's destroyer Daring with a loss of 157 lives. This was the sixth destroyer Britain has lost thus far, and brought her total fleet losses to 25 vessels.

In the Near East

Little more was heard of the 100,000 British colonial troops landed recently at Suez and dispersed throughout the troubled Near East. But Russian frontiers of Turkey, India, Afghanistan and Persia were still guarded closely against a possible Red thrust. Biggest surprise came from Turkey, where the government suddenly applied the national defense law and assumed virtual dictatorial powers. Meanwhile the Ankara press warned civilians that, as non-belligerent allies of Britain and France, Turks must be ready for a "supreme effort this spring."

CONGRESS:

Trade Pacts

Foreign policy held congressional attention as the house ways and means committee reported favorably a resolution to extend for three years the administration's reciprocal trade program. The program itself was no issue, for Glenn Frank's G. O. P. planning committee okayed the low tariff idea in principle one day before the house took up the resolution (See POLITICS). Instead, G. O. P. lined against Democrat on an amendment which would force senate ratification of each trade pact. At present the administration can make pacts without congressional approval.

Meanwhile congressional economy advocates cheered house passage of the $965,779,000 naval appropriations bill, which was $111,700,000 below President Roosevelt's budget estimate. In all, this meant house and senate had cut about $270,000,000 from budget estimates, leading Kentucky's Sen. Alben Barkley to remark that he thought new taxes could be avoided. (President Roosevelt had asked a $460,000,000 for "emergency" defense costs.)

Biggest problem before the senate was the agriculture appropriation bill, from which the house had slashed $66,000,000. The farm bloc wanted this cut restored, also wanted $225,000,000 for parity payments. If this program goes through, the economies thus far would be nullified.

POLITICS:

G. O. P. in the Saddle

By late February enthusiastic Republicans had taken the political ball completely away from the Democrats, who rested insecurely on their laurels. At Washington, the G. O. P. national committee heard Chairman John D. M. Hamilton announce he would welcome a chance to whip Franklin Roosevelt in the 1940 campaign. Then the committee decided to hold its convention in Philadelphia on June 24. Next day, at Miami, Democratic Chairman Jim Farley hurriedly set July 15 as date for his Democratic convention.

Republicanism had more enthusiasm than originality. Col. Robert R. McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune, (which hates the New Deal to death), dragged out the moth-eaten red herring in a speech at Jackson, Mich., birthplace of the Republican party. Colonel McCormick saw Communism in everything he looked at, censorship in the U. S. mails and an open conspiracy between the White House and the Kremlin.

GLENN FRANK
Not entirely critical.

More sanity characterized the G. O. P. program committee's 116-page report, prepared by a 200-man strategy body under Dr. Glenn Frank, former president of the University of Wisconsin. Criticized were (1) pump priming; (2) emergency monetary powers; (3) legislative control over wages and hours; (4) the U. S. housing program; (5) government competition with business, and (6) the New Deal power program.

The committe's proposals embodied quite a few Democratic tenets, indicating how far the G. O. P. has swung away from rock-bound conservatism. Proposals: (1) return of gold standard; (2) 20 per cent cut in federal expenses, and a balanced budget by 1942; (3) amendments to the Wagner act; (4) a reciprocal trade program to safeguard agriculture; (5) improvements and expansion of social security; (6) "protective," not "restrictive" U. S. regulation of business; (7) a farm program which would embody party payments.

TREND

How the wind is blowing . . .

LABOR—New York's Sen. Robert Wagner has urged creation of a federal mediation board to settle all types of strikes.

CAPITAL—Seeking a "voice for the employer in national labor legislation," the successful Associated Employers of Oregon will sponsor a meeting in Spokane on March 26 pointing the way for a national organization.

BANKING—After 80 years of private banking, the venerable New York house of Morgan will become a public corporation April 1.

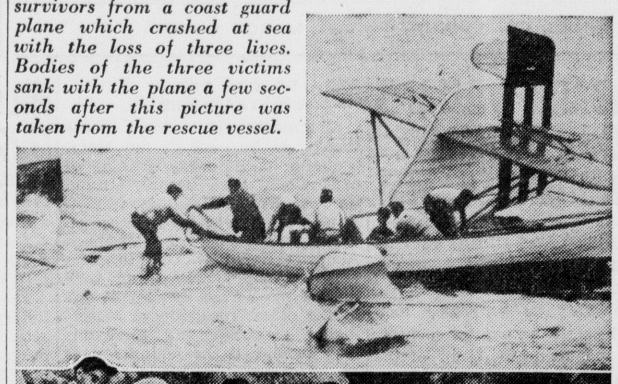
RAILROADS—Effective March 24, eastern U. S. railroads will lower basic passenger coach fares to 2 cents per mile. Present fare: 2½ cents.

FINANCE—Britain's treasury has requisitioned private British holdings of 60 U. S. securities, seeking funds for purchase of war materials in the U. S.

INDUSTRY—A federal reserve board report indicated that volume of U. S. industrial production dropped from 128 last December to 120 in January, indicating a definite faltering in industry's pace.

Rescues Are 'Tops' in Drama But They're Soon Forgotten

Rescue efforts, successful or otherwise, make dramatic news pictures. Often they go down in history, but more often hero and victim alike are soon forgotten, their fleeting moments of fame giving way next day to fresher news. Below: Whaleboat picking up survivors from a coast guard plane which crashed at sea with the loss of three lives. Bodies of the three victims sank with the plane a few seconds after this picture was taken from the rescue vessel.



Above: Members of a searching party lower Roger Carney from a Utah mountainside after youth had been found, his leg broken by a fall. He had been missing two days.

Roosevelt Bandwagon Is Rolling, And Party Foes Really Fear It

Steam Roller Drive Is On for Third-Term Nomination And Only President Himself Is in Position To Apply Brakes.

By WILLIAM BRUCKART
WNU Service, National Press Bldg., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON.—Some of the anti-Roosevelt Democrats have begun to get frightened. It is no joke to say that they fear they may get run over by the Roosevelt bandwagon on its way to the third term. There is a real drive under way to give the Democratic nomination to Mr. Roosevelt, again, and anybody who laughs it off is just foolish.

I am not saying in this dispatch that Mr. Roosevelt is sure to be nominated. I am not even convinced yet that he will run at all. The story this week deals, on the contrary, with the gigantic, steam-roller type of effort that is being put forward by Mr. Roosevelt's supporters who are with him, right or wrong. The subject is discussed again only because there is nothing quite as live here in the national capital as the Roosevelt third-term movement.

Mr. Roosevelt is the only person in a position to put on the brakes of this bandwagon. He has not done so. More than that, we are informed from Hyde Park where he was spending a week-end at that time, that he would announce his decision in his own time and not at a time to be determined by editors of newspapers. He was peevish about questions from reporters as to when an announcement would come; he was irked to the point where he declined even to wisecrack about it, and that means he was much irked.

In the meantime, many of the Roosevelt backers are in a tough spot. Some of his leaders around the halls of congress would like very much to have something to guide them. But they have had nothing, and their feelings are rather drooping.

One of the problems that is confronting Democrats in the senate, particularly, has to do with votes they cast 12 or 13 years ago. It will be recalled how Senator LaFollette, the Wisconsin progressive, conducted a scourge of President Calvin Coolidge. As I remember, Mr. Coolidge had announced that "I do not choose to run," but talk of drafting him for another term was continuing at a great pace. Mr. Coolidge stood by his decision that he regarded his tenure as having been two terms and was through.

LaFollette's Resolution on Presidential 'Third Terms'

Under these circumstances, young Senator LaFollette, who did not like Mr. Coolidge any way, brought in a resolution expressing the sense of the senate as in opposition to the third term for any President. I believe I will print that text. It ought to be valuable reading matter. The resolution read:

"Resolved, That it is the sense of the Senate, that the precedent established by Washington and other Presidents of the United States, in retiring from the Presidential office after their second term, has become by universal concurrence a part of the republican system of government; and that any departure from this time honored custom would be unwise, unpatriotic and fraught with peril to our institutions."

The chief reason why the resolution, so bitterly debated in 1928, is recalled is that there are about 20 senators who voted for the resolution who still are members of the senate today. Some of them are among the main shouters for a Roosevelt third term, and it strikes me that the laugh is on them, this time. Some of the number, however, can show a most consistent record as a result of the vote they cast 12 years ago. Tydings of Maryland, Smith of South Carolina, Harrison of Mississippi or King of Utah, Glass of Virginia or Wheeler of Montana—each of these can properly oppose a third term for Mr. Roosevelt because they voted against another term for Mr. Coolidge.

Here Comes the Bandwagon

According to William Bruckart, anti-Roosevelt Democrats fear the wheels of bandwagon that is now rolling for a third-term nomination for the President.

Supporters of Mr. Roosevelt on the other hand, have begun in earnest a drive to return him to the White House next year.

The recent "peace-offensive" of the President seems to lack political dickering, according to Bruckart.

Backers of 1928 Resolution Are Now 'On the Spot'

But just where will the boys land who voted against a third term in the 1928 resolution and now are shouting the loudest for Mr. Roosevelt. Among these is Senator Barkley of Kentucky, the Democratic leader and Roosevelt spokesman in the senate; Wagner of New York, who has pushed more of the Roosevelt social legislation through congress than any other man and has been a Roosevelt right-or wrong supporter, and there is the great popper-offer, Senator McKellar of Tennessee. Senator Pittman of Nevada, president pro tempore of the senate, the Roosevelt leader in foreign policy surely will not find it easy to explain his support of Mr. Roosevelt; that is, it will be more difficult for him to stick by the President on a third term issue than it will be for Sen. Walter George of Georgia to oppose a third term. Senator George was among those to be purged, in the 1938 elections, it will be recalled.

Sen. Barkley

In connection with the heavy artillery that is blasting away to bring about a third term nomination for the President, there is much talk in Washington that links his current "peace offensive" with politics. I do not regard this as sound. It may not be denied that a strong effort towards establishment of peace in Europe, if successful, or only partially successful, would produce support in undreamed of character for Mr. Roosevelt.

President's Peace Efforts Seems Devoid of Politics

At the moment, however, I repeat I do not place too much faith in the talk that the President is doing these things purely for political purpose. He has named Myron C. Taylor, former United States Steel corporation president, as his personal representative to the Vatican. Mr. Taylor will work with the pope in whatever way is possible in promotion of peace.

Myron C. Taylor

Next after that came the appointment of Sumner Welles, undersecretary of state, to go a misson to England, France, Italy and Germany. The nature of Mr. Welles' mission has not been clarified beyond the fact that he is to gather information wherever he can find it with respect to methods of an approach to peace among the belligerents.

If one couples the dizzy activity of the Roosevelt third-termers in a dozen states with the "peace offensive" and combine the two with the vast machine built up by patronage and billions of federal expenditures—if one thinks of the scene in that light, it is not difficult to recognize why some of the old timers are fearful of being hurt by the Roosevelt bandwagon.

There is against that proposition, however, the known determination of many important leaders to oppose a third term to the limit of physical endurance. Many times, of course, Washington is the worst place in the world from which to appraise public sentiment, but when astute warhorses—fellows who have battled for votes time after time on the hustings—say that a third term for Mr. Roosevelt will destroy the Democratic party definitely and finally, you have something that approximates the fervor of religious warfare. Those fellows will not take their licking lying down.

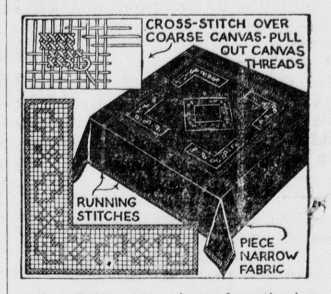
It ought to be recalled here, however, that only one of all of the Democratic aspirants has had the courage to announce his candidacy without any reference to what Mr. Roosevelt's decision may be. That is Vice President Garner. He and his supporters are going after delegates wherever one can be found and they are operating earnestly. Mr. Garner is no tyro as a politician. I suppose he has made bad guesses during his 40 years in politics, but I suspect the figures the third-term bugaboo is just the New Dealers squeals in the political woods.

White Embroidery On a Dark Color

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

CROSS-STITCH is combined here with plain running stitches to make a smart luncheon cloth that may be embroidered quickly in coarse white embroidery thread. The material may be broadcloth or other smooth-finish cotton. The color is a deep maroon and the white design is very effective on this background.

This cloth is made of two 1½-yard lengths of 36-inch-wide material. Split one piece lengthwise through the center and join to the sides of the other piece by machine. The seams are covered by the rows of running stitches. You do not need a stamping pattern to make the cross-stitch design. Baste coarse open-mesh embroidery canvas over the material; then follow the design given here at the lower left. Repeat the corner of the design to make the four corners of the center square.



NOTE: There are 36 embroidery stitches illustrated in Mrs. Spears' Sewing Book 2; also several original designs for table covers; men's ties; mittens; hats; purses; Baby's bassinet; doll's wardrobe; five ways to mend fabrics. Ask for Book 2, enclosing 10 cents coin. Address Mrs. Spears, Drawer 10, Bedford Hills, New York.

How To Relieve Bronchitis

Bronchitis, acute or chronic, is an inflammatory condition of the mucous membranes lining the bronchial tubes. Creomulsion goes right to the seat of the trouble to loosen germ laden phlegm, increase secretion and aid nature to soothe and heal raw, tender, inflamed bronchial mucous membranes. Tell your druggist to sell you a bottle of Creomulsion with the understanding that you are to like the way it quickly allays the cough or you are to have your money back.

To Check Constipation Get at Its Cause!

If constipation has you down so you feel heavy, tired and dopey, it's time you did something about it. And something more than just taking a physic! You should get at the cause of the trouble.

If you eat the super-refined food most people eat, the chances are the difficulty is simple—you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean heavy food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines.

If this common form of constipation is your trouble, eat Kellogg's All-Bran regularly, and drink plenty of water. All-Bran isn't a medicine—it's a crunchy, toasted cereal. And it will help you not only to get regular but to keep regular. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

FOR Children's SNIFFLES

SPARE your child much of the misery of sniffling, sneezing, and smothery nostrils due to colds by inserting Mentholatum in his nostrils.

This gentle ointment soothes and protects irritated mucous membrane, reduces swelling, and thus opens breathing passages wider. It soon checks sneezing and sniffling.

Also rub Mentholatum on the child's chest, back, and neck. This will improve local blood circulation and help relieve cold discomforts more effectively.

Mentholatum helps in so many ways that you should always remember this: For Discomforts of Colds—Mentholatum. Link them together in your mind.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON
(Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

NEW YORK.—Old General Plutarco Elias Calles, Mexico's strong-man for 11 years, has repudiated force, on several occasions, but has stopped for just one more round. Just now a resident in southern California, the former president will be allowed to return to Mexico City, to try to recover his expropriated land, according to a dispatch from Mexico City.

Calles Returns To Mexico on Salvage Trip

The revolution against Porfirio Diaz in 1910 made much of breaking up the great land holdings and distributing them to the peasants. He made the land revolution as much as any man, but on June 15, 1930, he proposed to liquidate it—thus: "If we wish to be sincere, we must confess that agrarianism, as we have understood it and thus far practiced it, has been a failure." Five years later with the ascendancy of Cardenas, lean Indian Savonarola of communal doctrine, he was exiled, and his great estates at Santa Barbara were confiscated.

As a peasant youth in his native mountains he doubled in bar-keeping and school teaching. He led a savage strike against the Sonora Dodge copper interests, and in the turmoil of the revolution, joined Obregon and was president from 1924 to 1928. He was in Cardenas' cabinet and was supposedly pulling the strings, but suddenly hopped a plane for San Diego and took up golf.

He was an unyielding foe of the church during the years of his dictatorship, in the presidency and out. Muscular and vigorous, at 63, with high cheekbones and squinting mongoloid eyes, he is of the cut of the latter-day dictator; and several times there have been reports that he was planning a comeback. It is now indicated that he is up to nothing more important than trying to salvage something out of the agrarianism which he helped to start.

THIS writer had a letter from his old friend, Eddie Persons, of San Francisco, the other day in which Mr. Persons put Santa Barbara county, California, in a test-tube, as a clinical sample of what ruinous taxation can do to a minor commonwealth. It would appear that Santa Barbara county is carrying on just to save funeral expenses and Mr. Persons, one of the leaders of the San Francisco business community, is trying to do something about it.

When Champion Champions Cause It's Championed

It was a similar alarm, among many citizens, which started New York's unique tax march on Albany, in which thousands of citizens, representing 829 organizations, moved on the state capitol, "to apply the ax to the tax," as their banners and buttons had it. The new and seemingly unprecedented "economy front" is the state budget emergency committee, in which the various organizations converge. It was started by a man who was scratching gravel, literally and figuratively.

Henry M. Champion had a little sand and gravel pit on his 40-acre farm on the Chenango river, 20 miles north of Binghampton. He was doing nicely until taxes began to pull him down. He called a meeting of farmers in 1938 and formed the Chenango County Taxpayers' association, of which he was elected president. In their first year of ax work, they nicked $75,000 from the county budget, and, moving on from there, found eager allies in similar organizations, culminating in the state committee, with Mr. Champion as chairman. They chalked up a reduction of $26,500,000 in the state budget last year.

Mr. Champion was a punishing axman in his youth, working in logging camps in Arkansas and Wisconsin, the latter being his native state. His father is still a lumberman in northern Michigan. He came to New York state in 1914 and made his first visit to New York city last July, rallying the tax rebels.

He is a weather-beaten citizen, 44 years old, who doesn't look at all like the little man in the barrel—although his organization has this underpourished little chap, armed with a blunderbuss, on its badges.

Many mystics regard upstate New York as the cradle of prophecy—many prophets having risen there. If it isn't a prophet this time, it would appear to be a Watt Tyler, and the capitol stands on Nottingham hill. The little man in the barrel has had an uphill climb for many years and ought to take this slope easily.

KALTENBORN SAYS:

Enemies Stalemated After 6 Months Because Defense Outshines Offense

By H. V. KALTENBORN
Noted Radio Commentator.

AT THE end of the first six months of war we find that the major belligerents have not yet begun to fight, while the major neutral powers have begun to fight for peace. Small wonder that the late Senator Borah called this a "phoney" war.

Only in Finland is there a major military effort and mighty Soviet Russia does not even admit that she has gone to war against little Finland. When the war began no one expected Soviet Russia to participate in military operations and no one expected Finland to be invaded. On the other hand, everyone expected an immediate air-raid by hundreds of bombing-planes on the capitals of Europe, and for weeks the headlines spoke of the coming big offensives on the Maginot and Siegfried lines. Neither the raids nor the offensives developed during the first half-year of fighting. Why?

Defense Is Major Factor.

The primary reason is that in modern war, defense is stronger than offense. The war in Spain showed the world that air attack on large cities is tremendously destructive, but it also showed that it is not likely to be decisive. The expense in planes, fuel, bombs and aviators who do not return is apt to offset the military advantages gained in any mass bombing flight. And the effect on neutral opinion of the killing of thousands of women and children, together with the destruction of historic monuments in cities far away from any actual fighting zone, might well be disastrous.

The fear of such wholesale air-raids led France and Britain to surrender at Munich. Now, after a year and a half of additional intensive preparation for air-defense, they no longer fear German attack. They are prepared to meet it and could make it so costly that it would probably not be repeated. The successful defense of the Mannerheim line against the most highly concentrated Soviet military effort showed the strength of defense fortifications in modern war.

Why Poland Was Weak.

The two great surprises of this war so far have been Poland's weakness and Finland's strength. Poland's weakness arose from a lack of national unity and domination of the illiterate masses by an aristocratic caste. In the larger sense, the government of Poland was neither popular nor efficient. The Finnish people are literate, sturdy and possess a strong sense of social and political independence.

Just as the failure of Poland's defense plan undermined morale, the success of Finland's well-organized plan of defense has given tremendous encouragement to the army, the people and the government. But the success of the German blitzkrieg against Poland and the failure of Russia's blitzkrieg against Finland depended primarily on the difference between the attacking armies. The German army was well organized, well equipped, well directed. The Russian army is porly organized, poorly equipped and suffers from bad generalship.

Western Lines Invulnerable.

Already Finland's Mannerheim line has withstood an overwhelming Russian assault for more than three months. It is apparent, therefore, that the much more completely organized and much deeper Maginot and Siegfried lines would be similarly invulnerable to attack. And whereas Russia has a superiority of something like 20 to 1 against Finland, the forces lined up on both sides of the French frontier are practically equal in fighting strength.

In considering the progress of this war, we are too much inclined to dwell on military factors. Yet during this first half-year the military front has been less important than the diplomatic front and the economic front. There has even been a more continuous exchange of ammunition on the propaganda front than between the fighting armies themselves.

Radio and loudspeaker systems have made it possible for belligerents to talk to one another incessantly, directly on the fighting lines or indirectly through the air-waves. Nazi leaders are apprehensive about casualties in the propaganda battle. They impose severe punishment on anyone who listens to a foreign broadcast. The British and French, on the other hand, have enough confidence in their people to permit them to listen to whatever Dr. Goebbels orders said.

More Activity on Sea.

At sea, a war of movement has been possible. This is why there has been much more activity at sea than on land. Britain's control of the sea has again demonstrated its importance. The German fleet is bottled up. Except for submarines, the German navy and the German Merchant Marine have been swept from the seas.

The Near Eastern Franco-British army of half a million men under the leadership of General Weygandt is now waiting in Syria, ready for instant action against Russia or Germany in any part of the Balkans. This army may yet prove the decisive military factor in this war. Allied victories in Palestine and Turkey presaged the collapse of the Central Powers in 1918.

Germany's commerce - raiders were swept from the seas much more quickly than during the World war. The Graf Spee lies wrecked in Montevideo harbor after being put out of action by the combined efforts of three small British cruisers. The Deutschland, her sister pocket-battleship, thought it best to return to a safe German harbor.

Nazis Stress U-Boat Warfare.

But raiding with surface ships is a minor factor in Germany's sea warfare against Britain and France. The Germans remembered how close they came to forcing a decision with their submarines during the World war. They had from 60 to 75 submarines ready when the war began. For the first few weeks of the war, they used these to excellent advantage.

Then the protective measures which Britain developed during the World war and since became effective. The larger ships were sent out in convoy; airplane patrols were created; minefields against submarines were established and all the resources of the British navy were mobilized against the U-boats.

On the whole, they have proved effective. In six months, the British have lost 550,000 tons of merchant ships. At the same time, the French lost 75,000 tons and the neutrals 350,000 tons. This makes a total of a little over 1,000,000 tons.

Losses Not Important.

But nothing in these losses produced by mines and submarines even suggests the possibility of a decisive result. The British merchant marine alone totals 21,000,000 tons. The British claim that deducting from their losses purchases and new construction, their net loss in six months of warfare has been less than 200,000 tons. It is also probable that the losses will decrease rather than increase, since at sea as well as on land defense is proving itself stronger than attack.

Already submarine torpedoes are far less successful in destroying shipping than mines. The new magnetic mine sown by the Germans proved very destructive for the first few weeks in which it was used. Then more effective mine-sweeping methods and the establishment of narrow ship-channels which were carefully patrolled reduced the successes of Germany's mine-laying airplanes.

British Also Unsuccessful.

On the other hand, the British have been no more successful in their raids against the German navy. Both German and British submarines have destroyed an occasional warship, but these forays have been costly to the submarines attempting them. The British and French claim to have sunk between 40 and 50 German submarines since the beginning of the war. The Germans admit the loss of less than half this number. Yet whenever a submarine is lost, the entire crew is lost with it, and it takes five years to train men to handle a submarine under war conditions.

Talk about the Germans building one submarine a day is nothing more than talk. It is more likely that the Germans are completing anywhere from six to ten U-boats a month, which is just about the rate at which they are being destroyed

Already Planning for Peace.

There is, then, nothing decisive in action at sea or in the air. Defense is stronger than attack. But what about the economic front? That is probably the most important front of all and the one that will be dominant long after the war has ended. Already Secretary of State Hull is negotiating with the neutral powers to work out a plan of economic reconstruction. The plan must be ready for instant application on the day of the armistice if Europe is not to sink in to chaos when the fighting ends.

Every country in Europe, neutral and belligerent alike, has mortgaged its future. Only if the New world remains out of the war and stands ready to lend its resources for European reconstruction is there any hope of true peace. Europe was ready for revolution before the war came and will be much more ready for it when the war is done.

What After Collapse?

France and Britain count on economic pressure to bring about the collapse of Germany, but one wonders whether they have asked themselves, what then? Will they march into Germany at the head of a victorious army, establish a new Kaiser and a new Junker government? Or will they stand aside while Germany's underground Communist movement re-asserts itself and calls out for assistance to the Red brethren in Moscow?

There is the third possibility of organizing those liberal forces that have either been driven out of Germany or driven under cover within Germany, and helping them to re-establish constitutional government by granting them a generous peace. That would be the hardest task.

Rumania Under Pressure.

Meanwhile, there is more pressure behind the economic than behind the military war. Members of the Rumanian government are being bribed, bulldozed, flattered and cajoled by both sides. Both are seeking to purchase Rumania's oil and Rumania's grain. Each wants it so that the other cannot have it. The French and British offer gold, the Germans threaten war. So far, King Carol has kept a precarious balance; Britain and France continue to guarantee his frontiers and King Carol remembers the Blitzkrieg against Poland. Poland had been given the same guarantees.

On the diplomatic front, the Allied powers won their greatest victory in winning Turkey to their cause. This gives them control of the Dardanelles and the Black Sea, in case of war with Russia. It also assures France and Britain complete dominance of the Mediterranean thereby discouraging Italy from siding with Germany.

PATTERN SEWING CIRCLE DEPARTMENT

IT'S a button-front style (1902-B) which is one thing decidedly to recommend it, and this suave, simple dress has lots of other good points, too. It can be made with plain v-neckline and edged with bias fold. Or it can be made with a narrow roll collar as its only trimming. Sleeves are either short or three-quarter length. It's simple and unhampering enough for house wear, in gingham, linen or chambray; also tailored enough for the street, in thin wool, flat crepe or small-figured print.

It has just the detailing you like, if you have size to consider—a bodice deftly gathered for correct bust fit, beneath a smooth shoulder-yoke, a slim-hipped skirt, and a waistline drawn in by a sash bow or buckled belt. Everything about it is slenderizing as well as smart.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1902-B is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50, and 52. Size 38 requires 4½ yards of 39-inch material without nap; with short sleeves; 4⅜ yards with three-quarter; 3¼ yards braid or bias fold, or ½ yard contrast for collar.

The Lord Helps Those

One picture of today's youth—jobless, embittered, deprived of opportunity and cut off from new frontiers—has been so often paraded before the eyes of Americans we may be in danger of thinking all youth does is sit back on its haunches, wring its hands in despair, and bemoan some bygone age of opportunity when jobs, like plums, dropped into everyone's lap.

Though not an accurate picture, it must be admitted that if this defeatist view of youth is advanced often enough, young persons will eventually come to believe it themselves.

That time has fortunately not arrived. Encouraging proof of this is evident in the formation in San Francisco the other day of a self-help employment agency, by, of, and for young persons between the ages of 18 and 30. Conceived by the chief of cashiers at the San Francisco World's Fair, when the closing of the Exposition left hundreds of clerks and cashiers without immediate work, the idea has won immediate support. A business organization of the city supplied free office space. One committee of these young persons was formed to interview industrial and business employers, another to handle all office work, and a third to examine the qualifications of youths desiring membership. There are no dues, but persons obtaining work through its services will be expected to contribute 75 cents a week toward the organization's expenses for three months. If the organization proves successful, it has ambitiously cocked its hat at the eventual goal of seeking employment for some 12,000 San Franciscans between the ages of 18 and 30.

Observers will wish it well and a hearty "More power to you!" its example may inspire job-seeking youths elsewhere to work out similar plans for helping themselves. Neither depression nor recession has repealed the time-honored ruling that the Lord helps those who help themselves!

Sing, You Speedsters

Adding to America's greatest safety slogan—"Safety First!"— a whole brace of slogans, Rev. L. C. Miller of Manitou, Colo., last week offered to the nation's reckless motorist the following spiritual aid. Let the speeding driver, he advised, softly sing the following hymns as the speedometer begins its upward climb; At 25 miles an hour, "I'm But a Stranger Here"; at 45 miles, "Nearer, My God, to Thee"; at 55 miles, "I'm Nearing the Port and Will Soon Be at Home"; at 65 miles, "When the Roll is Called Up Yonder I'll be There"; at 75 miles, "Lord, I'm Coming Home". And we conclude with a last farewell, "May he rest in peace!"

What! A Man Can't Fish

All the way from Yakima, Washington, four feathered chieftains of the Yakima tribe of Indians arrived in California last week to argue with Uncle Sam in the circuit court of appeals. Up home, it seems, half the tribe was pinched for fishing without State licenses. The Indians claim that an old treaty, signed with the U. S. government in 1885, guarantees them the perpetual right to fish without let or hindrance. A federal court up north decided against the red men. But the poor Indian, in this case, is also a smart Indian he timed his appeal to the higher court down here perfectly.

For the first languorous spell of Spring is lazing over California just now—and in the Spring this is the fishin-est State there is!

When the acacias are in bloom, and the warm, soft soil is pushing up the flowers that remind everbody that Easter's just a few weeks ahead, and leaping trout glint in the sun over tumbling water—why then, men in offices, and men on court benches, itch to chuck work and worries and dig out the old tackle. The wily chiefs couldn't pick a better time to say plaintively, "Judge, they won't let us fish. Can that be right.

WINDOW BREAKING REPORTED AT DECOTO

A Decoto citizen was in Niles the first of the week to enter a complaint against some miscreant who groke a window in his home. Several such complaints have come from Decoto, and citizens there are disturbed over the practice. The complainant stated that some fellow, there, when he gets a few drinks takes to throwing rocks, and is not particular in which direction they fly, or whose windows they break. An effort is being made to detect the man with the mighty arm and bring him before the authorities.

Natural Gas Not as Toxic As Manufactured Gases

Natural gas in general is not considered as toxic as the manufactured gas, which has a higher percentage of carbon monoxide. The American Cyclopedia tabulates the constituents of various natural gases and compares them with coal gas. It shows from 80 to 98 per cent marsh gas (methane) up to 14 per cent other hydrocarbons, 0.4 to 4.6 per cent nitrogen, up to 0.2 per cent carbon dioxide, 0.4 to 0.95 per cent carbon monoxide, up to 1.5 per cent hydrogen. Coal gas is given an average of 40 per cent marsh gas, 4 per cent hydrocarbons, 2 per cent nitrogen, 0.4 per cent carbon dioxide, 6 per cent carbon monoxide, 46 per cent hydrogen.

The first gas company in this country was the Gas Light company of Baltimore, incorporated February 5, 1817; it made and distributed coal gas and the first street in Baltimore was lighted with the gas on February 17. The first natural gas company was the Fredonia Gas Light & Water Works company, organized in Fredonia, N. Y., in 1865. Natural gas had, however, been used as an illuminant in Fredonia as early as 1824, a pipeline being led from a well to the hall where the great Lafayette was given a reception. A few years later natural gas was being used for fuel and light in Findlay, Ohio.

Village 'Flopped' at First

In Greenfield Village, at Dearborn, Mich., the heart of his industrial empire, and in the vast museum that adjoins and complements the village, Henry Ford has gathered the largest, finest and most diverse collection of Americana extant. Conceived by Mr. Ford many years ago as an educational project, the Edison institute (named for his great friend, Thomas A. Edison), which comprises both museum and historic village was opened to the public in June, 1933. Fewer than 400 persons visited it on the opening day; fewer than 12,000 the first month. By the summer of 1935 its fame had so spread—by word of mouth and the increasingly voluminous books and articles about it by collectors, antiquaries, historians and special writers for every type of publication—that 4,000 visitors in a day and 80,000 in a month were not unusual attendance figures. More than 350,500 saw it that year.

PIONEERING, OLD AND NEW

There has come into the historical window at the Reynold's store in Irvington a most interesting picture, that of the Pioneer Club. They are a sturdy-looking group, and from all accounts they were just what they looked. They had that priceless characteristic, a combination of idealism with practical realism too, without which they would not have pioneered.

Some of these pioneers came across the great plains, the trails marked by the bleaching bones of wagons and animals; some of them came around the Horn, a long, hard trip; some came by way of the Isthmus, but no matter which way they came, it took high degree of courage and persistence to leave comfortable homes for an unknown country.

They came; they saw; they conquered. Their era is past, and we profit by their endeavors, but not all pioneering has been done because there is no more virgin land to be taken up.

We have countless other fields for pioneering. Men are still working on a fool-proof flying machine Great industries flourish as the result of this kind of pioneering, and one of these great industries is looking for a new site, one free from adverse weather conditions when testing flights are needed. We understand that the Boeing company of Seattle are considering relocating in San Francisco. San Francisco with its fog bound coast and communistic labor troubles.

Down in a field near Warm Springs stands a lonely little wooden hanger, unless it has been torn down recently. That represents real pioneering too, for it was built by Sammy Metzger to house his plane, the only real airman in the Township.

Was there anything wrong with that location? We know that there are days on end which are foggy in San Francisco, Oakland, Alameda and Berkeley that are bright and sunny at Warm Springs. There is ample land there, cheap power, the best of accessibility and all the requisites for a great air-plane factory. We wonder if the civic leaders have the push necessary to go after such an industry and get it established here. We can so well imagine what it would mean to our Township in added business and importance, for we lived in the country at the time the great Santa Fe Railroad was built thru Missouri, and we saw towns spring up over night. Destiny calls, are we ready to do our part?

COOK the New Way!

SAVES YOU TIME, FOOD and MONEY

What's new in the modern gas ranges — the C.P. Certified Performance Gas Ranges?

First of all, there is new speed from faster, new-type top burners—faster pre-heating ovens and broilers to save cooking time. Then it is possible to save on food with waterless cooking on the new simmer burners that prevent vegetables from "boiling away" or from the low temperature ovens that reduce meat shrinkage and tenderize the cooking of less expensive cuts of meats. Fuel costs, too, are less because the new burners use less gas and scientific insulation reduces heat loss from oven and broilers.

These are a few of the advantages of the modern C.P. Gas Ranges. You can enjoy them now in your home. Right now, too, you can save money when you buy your Gas Range. Spruce up your kitchen for spring. Save Ten Dollars on a new Gas Range.

WATER RUNS AWAY AND FLOODS LUMBER YARD

The Hansen Lumber yard in Niles was one of the firms that had trouble because of the eccessive rain. Monday night, with the heavy downpour, the drainage at the Southern Pacific tracks became clogged, diverting the water from its regular channel. It ran down the track and into the lumber yard. There was no damage done to the stock, but Mr. Bonde and his crew worked most of Tuesday washing out the mud, and replacing the gravel about the yard.

THIS RIDDLE AN EASY ONE FOR RAILROAD MEN

If you're tired of crossword puzzles, here's a railroad riddle from Harvey Braun, local agent for the Southern Pacific Company.

How can Southern Pacific's west bound "Californian", popular economy train on the Chicago-Los Angeles run, arrive in Yuma, Arizona, today and leave yesterday?

Well, it's because Yuma is the beginning and end of a time zone, which makes it necessary for west bound travelers to set back their watches one hour at that point.

That being the case, it so happens that the "Californian" rolls into Yuma at 12:35 a. m., Mountain Time, on Sunday, say; stops 15 minutes, and departs at 11:50 p. m., Pacific Time, Saturday!

Sparsely Settled Norway Has Influenced World

Norway is a rugged, sparsely inhabited land whose effect on the rest of the world has been out of all proportion. In ancient times and in the modern world, a vitality has gone out from its savage mountains and fertile glens which few countries, sleeping in the sun, have been able to equal.

The Norse people, 1,000 years ago, bestowed their enduring blood on neighboring regions over an arc of thousands of miles. England in particular, but also Scotland, Ireland and northern France, are partly Norse. This infusion, to be sure, was not by choice of the peoples infused but was the consequence of red raids performed by the dreaded Vikings over two centuries. The Vikings were not called benefactors by their contemporary victims but such the centuries have proved them to be, for the Viking drops in the native streams have certainly had a quickening and strengthening effect.

Nowadays the Vikings sail no more but the curious, vital principle which made them take to the lonely seas courses around the world in freshets of printer's ink. In the past half-century tremendous figures have arisen along Norway's stony coast; figures whose shadows stretch in all directions from the tropics to the ice. Ibsen is first of these; the passionate playwright whose genius struck shackles from the wrists of all who write for the theater, brought realism to the modern stage and proved that the playhouse might also be a social laboratory.

Genius of a gentler sort was Bjornson, less stern but also of enduring vigor. Most recently was Hamsun. Sigrid Undset is read everywhere on earth.

HELPFUL SON

The angler was relating a fishing story to his neighbors.

"Yes," he said, proudly, "I caught the biggest fish of my career last night. It was a bass, and weighed seven pounds, two ounces."

His small son, who had been listening, chipped in: "Yes, and daddy was so kind he gave it to my kitten."

Lobster

The waiter was taking the order of a pretty girl who was accompanied by a pudgy middle-aged man. When she did not mention the lobster included in the meal she ordered, he asked: "And how about the lobster?"

To which the fair lady replied: "Oh, he can order whatever he likes."

That Nagging Backache
May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action
Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.
You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

The Honorable Uncle Lancy

THE STORY THUS FAR

Left orphans by a tragic automobile accident which claimed the lives of their mother and father, three sisters, Helen, Adele and "Limpy," are visited by their Aunt Olympia, politically minded wife of Senator Alencon Delaporte Slopshire. She insists that the girls return with her to Washington, to make their home with them. In addition to loving the girls, Aunt Olympia knows they will be a terrific political asset. Senator Slopshire has as his political opponent one Brother Wilkie, a minister, whose political campaign is furthered by seven "unspeakable brats" who sit on the rostrum with him while he makes speeches. Aunt Olympia and the Senator, kind and loving, nevertheless know that their three nieces will mean votes for the Senator. Senator Slopshire, a pleasantly foggy individual who depends on the astuteness of his wife, prepares for their coming. Though Limpy, the youngest, is 16, and Helen, the oldest, is 21, the Senator buys them all the toys and gifts he can find, feeling that "children" should be occupied. When they first meet their "Uncle Lancy," as he is to be known, the girls take him to their united bosom. Soon Adele, most beautiful of the sisters, meets Len Hardesty, publicity man for Brother Wilkie. Though it is Len's job to help defeat the Senator, he promptly falls in love with Adele.

The Senator coughed deprecatingly. "She's joking, Adele. This is pre-election stuff. Before election day, she'll be telling me, with forceful, if inelegant, expletives, that if I ever run for anything again she'll divorce, and probably de-neck, me. This is before-the-campaign stuff."

"My very words," said Aunt Olympia complacently.

"I forgot my quotes," admitted Uncle Lancy.

"What a cocky little fool I was, Brick," Helen wrote home to Iowa, "to think I could learn this racket in one year. Aunt Olympia's been in it right from the cradle—or at least from the marriage altar—and she says it's still so much haywire to her. It seems to be mostly luck and 'getting the breaks,' and of course, seizing Opportunity before the Opposition gets hold of it. Aunt Olympia says if she didn't watch every breath the Senator draws, he'd get himself impeached before breakfast. But I am learning a little, I think.

"There's one thing I've learned, and this is important. We've got to get over that provincial feeling that political opponents are social lepers, to be snubbed and ostracised and passed by on the other side. Aunt Olympia says it is a sign of superiority to hobnob with the Opposition—except at the polls, of course. She says it is only little fry who carry political animosities further than the Congressional Record. And I must say, she lives up to her philosophy. I've met quite a number of Republican wives and they are very nice to me and ask me to their meetings and teas, and Aunt Olympia encourages me to go. Sometimes she goes with me.

"Really, Brick, they are amazing, Uncle Lancy and she. Take Len Hardesty for instance. He is here half the time, mooning over Adele mostly, but always showing up at the dinner table and the cocktail tray.

And last week who should breeze in unexpectedly but Brother Wilkie, the Governor, running against Uncle Lancy. He 'phoned and Auntie asked him to dinner and he came. They were lovely to him and Aunt Olympia asked him to ask the blessing."

Aunt Olympia was far deeper in the campaign than either the girls or the Senator realized. She spent two hours every morning carefully conning the important [illegible] following [illegible] paper. And put in long narrow win-

"I suppose I'm to go bareheaded," said Adele.

"No, no, darling! Not quite. Teeny black and white something or other, with a bit of a veil and my only regret is that Len Hardesty won't be there to see it. He'd strangle the brats with his bare hands."

Helen did not follow the preliminary campaign activities as closely as her sisters. Studying the political racket kept her fairly busy. She read the Congressional Record conscientiously, if boredly. She spent hours visiting the Senator's committees and trying to make heads and tails of things which didn't make sense to an average intelligence like hers. She hung over the gallery of the House as if she had become a fixture there.

Aunt Olympia at last reached a stage of her preparations where she felt impelled to ask the Senator's advice.

"Del, how about a publicity man for our campaign?"

"Why, we're going to have Dave Cooper. He's the best we can get, since Len's tied up. I've already spoken to him about it. He's working on it now."

"Yes, of course, for you," she said significantly. "But how about the girls here?"

The Senator wisely said nothing, but the girls rose to it.

"For us!"

"We've had enough publicity to last us a lifetime!"

"Heavens, Auntie, do we rate a publicity man?"

"Oh, he'll only be an assistant to Dave Cooper, but we'll need someone to handle our end of it. Dave'll be pretty busy . . . We need someone more sentimental. For sob stuff. Heart interest. Human appeal. Let me see—um—ah! Del—what would you think of—well, what would you think of—say—someone like—Cecil Dodd?"

The Senator came to with a snap. "Cecil Dodd! . . . Cecil Dodd, my dear!" The Senator put on an extra pair of glasses to regard her more severely. "Why, Ollie, Cecil Dodd doesn't know the first thing about politics! He'd never get to first base. In fact, he'd never even get to bat. He's never been in a campaign in his life. Cecil Dodd—well, Cecil Dodd is what I call a sofa-sitter. But I've heard it expressed more forcibly and perhaps with more truth."

"Oh, he's not so dumb," Olympia rose to the argument. "He's chock-full of human appeal; full of adjectives; why, he knows adjectives I've never even heard of! He's the loudest exponent of youth and beauty in Washington. Do you remember those articles he wrote when Sissy Graves was killed in an airplane accident? A dozen people were killed—and some of them important—but he wrote about Sissy with so much heart appeal that everybody forgot all about the rest of them and made it her exclusive fatality. I know it brought tears to my eyes."

"I don't go in for tears in a campaign," he said, more on the defensive than the girls had ever seen er? If you're not, you'd better get him and get him quick. He's tops."

The Senator coughed deprecati igly. "She's joking, my dear," he said.

"Don't be silly, Len. Of course we're having him . . . For the Senator . . . But we've got to have an assistant. You see, there's going to be quite a cavalcade of us—what with the trailer and the tent and the sound truck and three cars. We don't want anybody to work day and night for us. We're not like some candidates, who expect a poor publicity man to live, move and have his being with seven brats and a trumpeting beldame."

"I smell a rat," said Len Hardesty. "You never gave me an assistant."

"But we're a much larger party this year, you silly dunce . . . No, definitely, I am for you laboring classes and I will not have poor old Dave imposed on and worked to death, not even for the Senator. But we'll expect his assistant chiefly to handle our end of it, mine and the girls', when the Senator and Dave are off on their flying junkets and we're cooped up in the trailer. We'll need someone rather young and fairly presentable, don't you think? So he can be a sort of companion to the girls when they're dancing and riding and swimming? And you know yourself, Len, that fairly presentable publicity men are hard to get. I don't know that I've ever seen one."

"I'm sorry I spent the money to fly down," he said grimly. "If I'm to pick out a man for you, seems to me you ought to pay the bill out of your expense account."

"Unfortunately we haven't a percentage club, like the Governor," she disclaimed quickly. "Besides, darling, I don't expect you to pick him out."

"That's what I was afraid of," he admitted gloomily. "Now let's get this straight, Ollie. You speak of your cavalcade of cars. What's it to be? A campaign for re-election, or a specially conducted young ladies' tour with a presentable escort?"

"The election comes first, of course. But after all, the Senator—Uncle Lancy—and I cannot overlook our responsibility to these poor dear children. We must provide for them as best we can, even in the exigencies of a campaign. Who would you suggest?"

"I wouldn't suggest anybody. I'd suggest putting the girls in jail till I get rid of the Governor. They don't need an escort. Dave Cooper can handle them. True, he's no Don Juan! He's forty and fat and married and chews tobacco. But he can give you all the publicity you need and more than you merit."

"I was thinking of someone like—well, how about Cecil Dodd?"

"Cecil Dodd! Lord, Ollie, if you upholster your trailer in purple duvetyn and silken cushions you'll elect the Governor! . . . Cecil Dodd! . . . Ollie, we've had our occasional differences but I've always admired you as a straight shooting, shoulder-to-shoulder old trooper . . . Cecil Dodd! . . . Do you want to shatter a young man's fondest illusions? . . . Cecil

CHOOSE DESSERT TO FIT MAKEUP OF MEAL

(See Recipes Below)

What Shall I Serve for Dessert?

To most of us "something sweet" served at the close of a meal is as important as the main dish itself. For dessert, men undoubtedly have a penchant for such substantial items as pie, ice cream and chocolate cake; but they seem to like the homey, less spectacular desserts almost as much. Baked apples, old-fashioned apple dumplings, rice pudding and fresh fruit desserts are masculine favorites and they're simple enough to suit the youngsters of the family, too. You'll find suggestions and recipes for the desserts that father likes, in my cook book, "Feeding Father."

When you choose a dessert, consider first the meal as a whole—is it substantial or light? If it's a hearty, heavy meal, choose a light dessert, because appetites are likely to be pretty well satisfied by the time the dessert course appears. On the other hand, if the meal has been light, a hearty, satisfying sweet course is in order.

Choose your dessert, too, to fit the general make-up of the meal. Don't forget that contrast is important. If you've had a fruit salad, avoid serving a fruit dessert; if spanish rice or macaroni made up the main dish of the meal don't serve a starchy sweet.

And speaking of desserts: when your facilities for entertaining are limited, why not plan a "dessert party"? Invite your guests to skip their dessert at home, and have it with you. Dessert, with a beverage, is all you serve—and you serve it before the bridge playing or other entertainment begins.

Fruit Macaroon Dessert.
(Serves 6)

3 cups canned fruit
¾ cup flour
¾ cup sugar
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
1 egg

[illegible]our fruit and juice into shallow [illegible] about 6 by 10 by 2 inches in size. Sift together the flour, sugar, baking powder and salt. Add unbeaten egg and mix well. Spread this mixture (which will be very crumbly) over the fruit and [illegible]e in a moderately hot oven (375 [illegible]rees) for about 30 minutes.

Chocolate Fig Pudding.
(Serves 6)

½ cups soft bread crumbs
½ teaspoons baking powder teaspoon salt
cup white sugar
cup brown sugar
cup milk
eggs (beaten)
squares unsweetened chocolate (melted)
½ pound dried figs
¼ cup suet

[illegible]ombine crumbs, baking powder, [illegible]t and sugar. Add milk and eggs. [illegible]nd in the melted chocolate. Wash [illegible]s, remove stems and put figs and [illegible]t through food chopper. Add to [illegible]er ingredients and mix well. Pour [illegible] a well greased casserole, cover [illegible] bake in a slow oven (250 de[illegible]es) for 2½ hours. Serve hot with [illegible]ustard sauce or whipped cream.

Orange Torte.
(Serves 6)

½ cup butter
¾ cup granulated sugar
1 egg (separated)
1¼ cups general purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon soda
½ cup buttermilk
½ cup dates (cut fine)
½ cup nut meats (cut fine)
1 teaspoon lemon extract
1 orange

[illegible]Cream butter thoroughly; then [illegible]d ½ cup sugar while beating con[illegible]ntly. Blend well and add beaten [illegible]g yolk. Mix and sift together the [illegible]ur, baking powder, salt, and soda. [illegible]d alternately with the butter[illegible]lk, beginning and ending with the [illegible]ur mixture. Add dates and nuts, lemon extract and orange pulp, reserving orange juice carefully. Fold in the beaten egg white. Place in small angel food or torte pan (well greased). Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for approximately 35 to 40 minutes. After removing from oven allow cake to stand undisturbed in the pan for 10 minutes. Then pour over it, by teaspoonfuls, the orange juice in which the remaining ¼ cup sugar has been dissolved. Serve with whipped cream if desired.

Lemon Sauce.

1 cup sugar
grated rind and juice of 1 lemon
2 egg yolks
2 tablespoons cornstarch
1 cup boiling water
⅛ teaspoon salt

Add grated rind and juice of the lemon to the sugar. Beat egg yolks until light. Moisten cornstarch with a little cold water and add to the beaten egg yolks. Mix thoroughly with lemon and sugar mixture. Place in double boiler, add boiling water and salt and cook, stirring constantly, until thickened. Serve hot.

Red Raspberry Snow Balls
(Makes 6 Snow Balls)

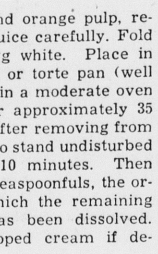
¼ cup butter
½ cup sugar
1 cup general purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ cup milk
2 egg whites (beaten)

Cream the butter. Add sugar and beat well. Mix and sift flour, baking powder, and salt. Add alternately with the milk and then fold in the beaten egg whites. Steam in small buttered molds for 30 to 35 minutes. Serve with red raspberry sauce.

Apple Dumplings.

2 cups flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup shortening
½ cup milk
¼ cup orange juice
6 tart apples (medium size)
½ cup sugar
nutmeg
cinnamon
butter

Mix and sift dry ingredients and cut in shortening; add liquid. Roll dough to quarter-inch thickness and cut in 4-inch squares. Pare and core apples. Place one apple in center of each square and fill center of apples with a mixture of sugar, cinnamon and nutmeg. Dot with butter and pinch the four corners of the dough together. Prick with a fork and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for 30 to 40 minutes. Serve with lemon sauce.



Have You Ordered Your Copy of 'Feeding Father'?

You'll find in this clever cook book—by Eleanor Howe, not only tested recipes for father's favorite desserts, but recipes for the other foods he likes, as well. There are "masculine menus," too—dinners planned especially for father—and hints on how to cook the foods he likes. Send 10 cents in coin to "Feeding Father," care of Eleanor Howe, 919 North Michigan Ave., Chicago, Illinois. You'll get your copy of "Feeding Father," by return mail.

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

If you're planning a party for St. Patrick's day, be sure to watch for Eleanor Howe's column next week. You'll find here several practical menus for that Irish holiday, recipes tested in Eleanor Howe's own kitchen, and suggestions for table decorations, too.

Things to make

HERE is a new department that we know is going to meet with tremendous popularity with our readers, for it brings you the opportunity of combining pleasure and profit. With jig, coping or keyhole saw, you may cut these designs from wallboard, plywood or thin lumber. Each pattern brings accurate outline of the design, and complete directions for making or painting.

Men, women, boys and girls are finding this a fascinating pastime, and with each order will be sent a circular showing many additional novelties which you may make at home.

Today, we are showing a yard design that will appeal to many, for the long-ago days of "Gone With the Wind" are recalled vividly in these charming cutout figures. Your own imagination might turn them into the vibrant Scarlett O'Hara and the reserved Melanie Wilkes in person. And your jig or coping saw plus a bit of wallboard or plywood will produce these figures for your yard.

Each comes on its own pattern. The beruffled hoop skirt lady at the left is about 24 inches tall and is given on Z9067, 15 cents—she holds a box for flowers. The belle at the right is on pattern Z9068, 15 cents—about 24 inches tall, and a sprinkling can is in her hand.

Order numbers Z9067 and Z9068, 15 cents each, from: Aunt Martha, Box 166-W, Kansas City, Mo.

What!
A Man Can't Fish

All the way from Yakima, Washington, four feathered chieftains of the Yakima tribe of Indians arrived in California last week to argue with Uncle Sam in the circuit court of appeals. Up home, it seems, half the tribe was pinched for fishing without State licenses. The Indians claim that an old treaty, signed with the U. S. government in 1885, guarantees them the perpetual right to fish without let or hindrance. A federal court up north decided against the red men. But the poor Indian, in this case, is also a smart Indian he timed his appeal to the higher court down here perfectly.

For the first languorous spell of Spring is lazing over California just now—and in the Spring this is the fishin-est State there is!

Village 'Flopped' at First

In Greenfield Village, at Dearborn, Mich., the heart of his industrial empire, and in the vast museum that adjoins and complements the village, Henry Ford has gathered the largest, finest and most diverse collection of Americana extant. Conceived by Mr. Ford many years ago as an educational project, the Edison institute (named for his great friend, Thomas A. Edison), which comprises both museum and historic village was opened to the public in June, 1933. Fewer than 400 persons visited it on the opening day; fewer than 12,000 the first month. By the summer of 1935 its fame had so spread—by word of mouth and the increasingly voluminous books and articles about it by collectors, antiquaries, historians and special writers for every type of publication—that 4,000 visitors in a day and 80,000 in a month were not unusual attendance figures. More than 350,500 saw it that year.

PIONEERING, OLD AND NEW

There has come into the historical window at the Reynold's store in Irvington a most interesting picture, that of the Pioneer Club. They are a sturdy-looking group, and from all accounts they were just what they looked. They had that priceless characteristic, a combination of idealism with practical realism too, without which they would not have pioneered.

The Newark grammar school honored George Washington's and Abraham Lincoln's birthdays on Wednesday when a joint program was held. They were also given a two day holiday in the memory of George Washington. The program consisted of Loretta Pierce and Frank Reis, violin duet; Bobbie Cotton and Masakatsu Nakamaura, reading; Alice Silva. vocal numbers; Violet Lidikay, reading; Clifford Fields, piano solo; Ernestine Lilua accordion and John Ray Thuscott, piano numbers.

On Wednesday evening the Lostra Group met at the Newark Presbyterian church at two o'clock for their regular business meeting following in which the program in the afternoon consisted of a tour to some of the new homes in Newark with the afternoon terminating at Mrs. Sam Scott, where the hostesses served refreshments. Mrs. Sam Scott, Mrs. John Pauly and Mrs. Lee Silva were the hostesses.

Star Dust
STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

MOVIE stars who don't take a turn at radio are scarcer than hen's teeth these days. ZaSu Pitts, who has done a number of guest appearances on the air, is serving a thirteen-weeks term on a daily serial, "Big Sister," playing a character part. And Aileen Pringle is playing a newspaper woman on another serial, "Joyce Jordan—Girl Interne."

Ilka Chase isn't bothering with serials; she is coming out into the open and being herself, in a program sponsored by a cigarette company. It is something new in radio—a program about the woman's world, the world of the theater, fashion, current events and society, and it is called "Luncheon at the Waldorf."

Each Saturday Miss Chase entertains 50 guests at this very smart hotel. They are people prominent in journalistic, theatrical and fashion fields, and one of them is interviewed during each broadcast. If the guests are as witty as Miss Chase is the program should speedily reach top rating.

When Joan Fontaine and Brian Aherne were married a short time ago there was no time for a honeymoon trip; she was working in "Rebecca," and he was busy with "My Son, My Son." But he had time to plan what he considered a perfect trip; they had been asked to appear together in a stage play, and they'd hop from one city to another in his plane, having a fine time. Mrs. Aherne agreed.

Brian Aherne

But—he took her down to Del Monte in the plane to see some friends. On the way home they ran into chilly weather. When they landed at the airport, she announced that her nose was practically frozen, and she'd take no long trips in the open cockpit of that plane.

Joan Fontaine

Nothing daunted, Aherne promptly turned the plane in and ordered a cabin monoplane. Then the play was called off until autumn, and the tour of the country was shortened to a trip to New York, where they plan to remain until the first of May. During their stay their recent pictures will be shown at the Music Hall, which is a nice wedding present in itself.

—*—

Incidentally, Edward Small is practically snowed under by letters from young men who want to portray Rudolph Valentino in the picture based on the life of the Great Lover. About 10,000 letters and photographs have already arrived, as a result of Small's announcement that he intends to use an unknown player in the role.

—*—

Jean Hersholt has completed production on his second "Dr. Christian" movie. He formed his own motion picture company to film the story of "Dr. Christian," a role which he has played on the air for three years, until it is now one of the most popular dramatic broadcasts on the air. Hersholt will soon start looking for a site upon which a home for aged and disabled actors will be built; he is president of the Motion Picture Relief fund, and the money for the home comes from the movie stars' own program, "The Screen Guild Show," to which they donate their talent.

—*—

ODDS AND ENDS—Janet Logan, Paramount starlet, first attracted the attention of a talent scout because of her beautiful clothes (she is really one of Hollywood's best dressed girls); yet in her first feature picture she wears an old fashioned bed sheet draped into a coverall.

¶ Joe Emerson and the "Hymns of All Churches" choristers are recording a group of favorite hymns for use in small churches which cannot afford choirs.

¶ More than $100,000 in lost legacies has been recovered for the heirs on "The Court of Missing Heirs" in the comparatively short time that it has been on a coast-to-coast hook-up.

¶ The CBS sound man on "Grand Hotel" has two eyes on Betty Lou Gerson's pet bracelet; one is for keeping it off her wrist during broadcasts, the other covets it for filing under "sleigh-bells effects."

¶ Gene Autrey, the cowboy star of screen and radio, likes to fly, except when it's time to go to bed. He always travels in full cowboy regalia. It's hard enough to remove cowboy boots under the most favorable circumstances; when he climbs into a sleeper berth on a plane, he can't take his boots off. He's either got to stop flying or stop wearing cowboy clothes when he travels.

HELPFUL SON

The angler was relating a fishing story to his neighbors.

"Yes," he said, proudly, "I caught the biggest fish of my career last night. It was a bass, and weighed seven pounds, two ounces."

His small son, who had been listening, chipped in: "Yes, and daddy was so kind he gave it to my kitten."

Lobster

The waiter was taking the order of a pretty girl who was accompanied by a pudgy middle-aged man. When she did not mention the lobster included in the meal she ordered, he asked: "And how about the lobster?"

To which the fair lady replied: "Oh, he can order whatever he likes."

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

For Leather Chairs.—Rub equal parts of linseed oil and vinegar, well shaken, into leather chairs, occasionally. It keeps them in good condition.

* * *

It is not too early to look over window screens. Mend and paint them now so they will be ready when it is time to put them in.

* * *

Save the Buttons.—The continual ripping off of buttons by the clothes wringer can be prevented by folding the buttons inside the garment and holding it flat as you turn it through the wringer.

* * *

When poaching eggs, let water come to a full rolling boil, drop eggs into it, turn out gas and eggs will finish poaching in the boiling water.

Bathe Plants. — Plants drink through their leaves, hence an occasional bath or spraying helps keep house plants healthy by freeing the leaves of dust.

That Nagging Backache
May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

Widows, Children To Receive Federal Insurance Payments

ELIGIBLE FAMILY GROUPS IN THIS COUNTY WILL FILE CLAIMS WITH OAKLAND SECURITY OFFICE

The widow and children of any worker in Alameda County whose death occurred after last December 31 are entitled to monthly insurance payments from the federal government if the deceased father had had sufficient employment at jobs covered by the federal social security act with minimum earnings required by the law.

These payments are made regardless of the age at which the father's death occurred, according to Victor C. Broome, Oakland manager of the social security board, located at 1440 Broadway.

Some claims have been filed with his office, Broome said, but other families in this county may now be eligible. The Oakland office accepts claims for these payments from Alameda, Contra Costa and Solano counties.

The following requirements must be met to qualify for these monthly benefits: (1) the worker must have died after December 31; (2) the widow must have in her care a child or adopted child of the worker that is less than age 16 or under 18 if in school and (3) the worker must have been employed at jobs covered by the social security act in at least six calendar quarters since January 1, 1937, with earnings of at least $50 in each of those quarters from such employment.

These federal insurance payments, Broome explained, should not be confused with the state law in behalf of needy dependent children. Federal payments are made as a matter of right, and not based upon need, and can be paid only if the deceased worker's employment record shows that he has met the requirements of the social security act.

Workers in jobs covered by the federal law have a social security account card. They contribute one per cent of their wages or salaries and the employer pays an equal amount.

A free pamphlet entitled "100 Questions and Answers on Social Security" may be obtained by writing the social security board, 1440 Broadway, Oakland.

VARIETY OF TALENT TO PERFORM IN CAMPOS RECITAL

If you want to see modern dancing at it's very tops, novel interpretations of songs of the day, and delightful piano numbers, be sure to inspect the musical entertainment to be given by Oliver Campos and his pupils at the Woshington Union high school auditorium on Friday night of March 8th at 8 o'clock.

The cast comprises pupils ranging in age from five to twenty and together they promise you an evening of music that you will long remember. There is not a dull moment throughout the program as all monotony has been dispensed with because of the timely spacing of piano, vocal, accordion, dance and orchestra numbers.

Mr. Campos brings these recitals to the music lovers of this community each year and it is possible to give these free of charge to all the public only because of the fine cooporation given by Mr. Rathbone, the high school trustees, and the various merchants of the towns that go to make up this townsip. To all these over forty pupils and their parents feel deeply grateful as well as to the Township Register for its fine support, Mr. Campos says.

OSCAR NIEMTH HONORED AT BANQUET IN NEWARK

A birthday party was held for Oscar Niemth Sr., on Saturday evening at J. D. Silva's buffet. The gathering at their banquet consisted of members and their guests from the Cherry Creek Gun Club and the Blue Latern Gun Club of the northern and southern division. Mack Matheisen of Centerville had been slated as master of ceremonies, but due to a recent operation, he was unable to be present. Mr. Matheisen is reported to be improving at his home. Charles Cockefair, who was appointed master of ceremonies by Mack Matheisen, called on each and everyone present to make a few remarks. Everybody appreciated the banquet and had a good time, and also a lot of credit was given to J. D. Silva, chief chef, who is claimed to be the best chef in Southern Alameda County.

Those present were: Charles Cockefair, Jack Hafner, Jim Tobin, Fred Muller, Joseph Dias, Fred Reder, J. D. Silva, Oscar Niemth Sr., John Pope, Maurice Silva, Frank Veit, A. R. Duera, Jim Hardy, and M. D. Silva of Newark; Manuel Santos, Jack Klein, and John E. Dutra of Centerville, Henry Agnew, "Frenchy", and John Russo of San Francisco.

Charles X Responsible For Racing in France

Racing is supposed to have come into France from across the channel, and most sources credit its introduction into the country to the efforts of the Comte d'Artois, brother of Louis XVI and later Charles X of France, and it is supposed to have been on November 10, 1776, that the first event of this sort took place in this country. The race was run at Versailles, near the Chateau of Clagny. The French became so enthusiastic over this new sport that money flew about recklessly, and the sage Louis XVI tried, but in vain, to curb the betting.

Today there are race courses in the Paris region alone at Longchamp and Auteuil in the Bois de Boulogne, at Vincennes, Chantilly, Maisons-Laffitte, La Tremblay; and every important resort has an excellent race track, a long racing season, and a Grand Prix, the biggest purse of which is the Vichy Grand Prix for 300,000 francs on the first Sunday in August.

To the Duc de Morny, half-brother of Napoleon III, credit must be given for choosing Longchamp as the site of a new racetrack in 1856. He meant it to outclass all other tracks in beauty and style. The empress herself came to the first race; over 700 carriages and 300 horseback riders caused such a crush at the opening that the first race had to be postponed for a half hour. In 1863 the Grand Prix of Paris was established.

Livingstone's Tomb

The marble slab on the tomb of David Livingstone, the explorer, bears the following inscription: "Brought by faithful hands over land and sea, here rests David Livingstone, Missionary, Traveler, Philanthropist. Born March 19, 1813, at Blantyre, Lanarkshire. Died May 4, 1873, at Chitambo's Village, Ilala. For 30 years his life was spent in an unwearied effort to evangelize the native races, to explore the undiscovered secrets, and abolish the desolating slave trade of central Africa, where with his last words he wrote: 'All I can say in my solitude is, May Heaven's rich blessing come down on every one—American, English or Turk—who will help to heal this open sore of the world.' "

Trick With a Purpose

They had a stand of steel tubular scaffolding to seat nearly 12,000 people—the largest ever put up in the country—which swayed alarmingly under certain conditions: for instance, when the whole audience rose to "God Save the King." It was, of course, perfectly safe, and intended to vibrate according to the principles of its special construction. However, says Sir Barry, "we arranged for the band to play one or two false starts for the national anthem, which had the result of making the huge audience arise at different moments instead of loyally all together, and this had considerable damping effect on the vibration."—Humorist (London).
